F-Gas Question Time

Our annual new refrigerants question time will this year home in on the options available to the industry in the light of the F-Gas regulations, which are now almost finalised and set to become law in 2015.

This free-to-attend event will bring the supply chain together with an expert panel from across the industry, for a discussion on the major topics around F-Gas. The focus will be on discussing the practicalities of the new regulations and the considerations when working with new refrigerants, the standards and the training that may be necessary.

Panellists include:

Policy specialist Ray Gluckman, Enviros; Mike Nankivell, ACRIB;
Barry Lyons, F-Gas Consultant; Graham Wright, Daikin.

RICS, Parliament Square, London
21st May • 9am -1pm

Among the issues to be considered are:

- The most important changes to the F-Gas regulations and what the industry needs to do to accommodate them.
- The short-term and the medium term refrigerant options, from the R407s to R32 to HFOs. How they behave and where they can be applied:
- The natural alternatives.
- The practical and regulatory considerations for working with mildly flammable and flammable refrigerants.
- The training and skills implications of the new regulations.
- Are customers ready for the end of R22 – and what we can do about it?
